

Abstract

The present invention relates to a method to produce an austenitic alloy by an austenitic stainless substrate alloy of low Al content being coated with an alloy of higher Al content at a temperature between 100 °C and 600 °C, so that the resulting product has an Al content of 4,5–12 % by weight.